Letter From Senator Trumbull.
WASHINGTON, May 20, 1868.
Governor G. Koerner: My Dear Sir:

I feel sure I am right, and when the passion of the hour subsides, that I shall be able to satisfy all reasonable and fair minded men that it was my duty to decide according to my convictions, whether they agreed with my political friends or not. I was just as well aware before voting as now that Andrew Johnson was odious to the country, and that probably ninety-nine hundredths of the Republicans desired his removal; but to have convicted him of high crimes and misdemeanors because the party demanded it, when in my opinion he was not shown to be guilty of them, would have been monstrous. If the prosecutors have the right to dictate the verdict and judgment, the trial is a farce. No President who disagrees with Congress will hereafter be permitted to remain in office, if such a principle is to obtain—or to state the case more accurately, a majority of the House of Representatives, when two-thirds of the Senate agree with them politically, may at any time remove a President. That the Republican party has a right to demand the conviction of the President is horrible, and the sense of justice of the nation will revolt at such an idea when the passion of the hour subsides; and yet I have received numerous letters and telegrams telling me that the Republican party demands the removal of the President. I do not believe it, unless the tribunal appointed by the Constitution to try him believe him guilty of some crime or misdemeanor with which he stands charged. I think I am right in coming to the conclusion that no crime or misdemeanor justifying impeachment was made out in the case; but if mistaken in this I must, of course, take the consequences of my error of judgment, but to charge it as a betrayal of the party is cruelly unjust. What is the administration of justice worth when decisions are to be made, not according to law and justice; but at the dictation of a political party, or even of the whole people? In newly settled countries mobs and parties of regulation sometimes take the administration of justice into their own hands; but who ever heard of mobs even requiring courts to execute their decrees? The stories about corruption or improper motives influencing any Republican to vote against conviction are, of course, false. All the pressure—and it was very great, more than you know of—was on the other side, as an investigation, if one is ever had, will show. But for outside pressure I think no such vote as thirty-five could have been obtained for conviction on the eleventh article.—I enclose a copy of my opinion.

Very truly,
LYMAN TRUMBULL.

"PROPOSED ABOLITION OF QUEEN VICTORIA."—In the House of Commons, on the 23d of May, Mr. Rearden rose and said: "I beg to give notice that on Monday next I shall ask the First Lord of the Treasury whether it be true that Her Majesty the Queen was compelled, through delicate health, to retire from England during the remainder of this season; and, if so, whether it is the intention of Her Majesty's Government, out of consideration of Her Majesty's health, comfort and tranquility, and in the interest of the Royal Family and Her Majesty's subjects throughout the Empire, and especially of this metropolis [loud cries of "order!"], to advise Her Majesty to abdicate."

The Speaker—The House has anticipated my decision as to this question by the expression [loud cheers]—the indignant expression [renewed cheers] of feeling with regard to the terms employed in the notice of the honorable member. No doubt any question may be addressed by a member of this House to the confidential advisers of the Crown as to any matter relating to the discharge of public duties by the Sovereign; but these questions must be addressed in respectful and parliamentary terms. [Much cheering.] The question of the honorable member certainly does not appear to me to be couched in such terms. [Renewed cheers.]

Mr. Rearden—I beg very earnestly to apologize to the House for putting a question in any form of words which is either unparliamentary or not in strict accordance with the views of this House. [Order!] Nothing can be further from my views, mind or heart, than to do anything inconsistent with strict loyalty to Her Majesty. [Cries of "Order" and "Chair!"]

THE PRESBYTERIAN UNION POSTPONED.—The Old and New School Presbyterians will not unite this year. The New School Assembly adopted the resolution proposed as a basis of union, but the Old School Assembly desired some additional explanations. Hence, although the report recommending the union was adopted, there was added by the Old School Assembly a recommendation that the portion of the basis which referred to the confession being received in its historical or reformed sense, should be omitted; also that which gave freedom in stating, explaining and illustrating the doctrines of the confession according to the Reformed or Calvinistic system. The Old School proposed to strike out very material clauses bearing upon the question of freedom of interpretation of the confession. The action of the Old School Assembly did not meet with the favor in the New School Assembly which was necessary to insure the adoption of the amendment. The proposed amendments required one hundred and sixty-one votes in order to be carried in that body.—They only received one hundred and seventeen. A committee was appointed to which the subject was referred, but it reported it was too late to take action upon the matters under consideration. The New School Assembly was, therefore, dissolved without any definite settlement of the questions in interest. The committee of the New School Presbyterians being continued to act with Old School brethren, there will be further negotiation, so that when the Assemblies are again convened in 1869, there may be some plan of union adopted which will be satisfactory to both parties.
